I am a scientist and true scientists are first and foremost great observers. It's been a few years since I've observed something interesting.

Some places on our planet have a unique property. Influence on the climate. Through observations and old memories, I realized that maybe it is possible to cause rain, just by heating some special environments with a big bonfire.

In the place where I live, I observed that people set fire to the dry forest, and approximately two days later, the rains start. This is interesting. But it is only empirical knowledge.

I believe that an in-depth study will show that in many cultures rituals were performed to bring about the rains. I believe that an in-depth study is warranted on whether ancient and current rituals hold ancient and extremely relevant knowledge.

Perhaps this knowledge can help control the planet's temperature. I hope so.
